Of course, you CAN save money by putting it in your mattress, or behind the clock, or between pages of the family bible—but that saved money won't earn anything, and isn't even safe.

Better put savings into a bank, where they will be put to work and kept at work constantly, always earning good salaries.

Trained Diplomats Needed

It would be wide of the mark to charge the canal case solely to artless diplomacy. But it is apparent that the relations of the United States with some of its neighbors are handicapped by lack of the diplomatic habit, into which Great Britain long ago grew because it gave no thought to democratic rotation with its inescapable consequence of untrained men in service. Rear-Admiral Wainwright, speaking the other day to the American Academy of Political and Social Science, said that Oriental misunderstanding of the United States was largely due to our untrained representatives.

The "shrewd Yankee" is entitled to preach himself on his shrewdness. But it is too much to assume that native American ability, no matter how superbly trained in general scholarship, can always cope in the diplomatic arena with the subtle specialization of men who have spent their whole careers in diplomatic service. The United States has not suffered perceptibly in the estimation of the world because in the past, but an equivocal treaty of the moment, and on impression abroad that the country does not live up to its bargains, suggest the need for better trained diplomats in the future. They can come only by abolishing long henceforth not to make our embarrassing rotations and by resolutely basing and principal consular posts a reward for stump speeches.—Indianapolis Star.

The Sinews of War

If war must come, no other nation could so easily finance one as the United States. Our wealth is the greatest, our national debt the smallest, and our resources the most remunerative.

With 18 times the federal revenue of Mexico, the United States pay in interest charges annually only a half more than that revolution-torn republic. Our national debt costs only a tenth that of Russia each year, an eighth that of Germany, a fifth that of England, and a ninth that of France.

But America's wealth-producing capacity surpasses all countries. It can most readily maintain itself within itself. Its bonds command the highest price of those of any nation.

The per capita wealth of the United States is three times as large as it was when the Civil War broke out and the country's population is also three times greater than it was then. But during that conflict one Philadelphia banker alone sold $700,000,000 of government bonds in five months.

If necessary, the United States could today market $1,000,000,000 4 per cent bonds in a week and get a premium for all of them.

While every patriotic American hopes it may not be necessary to call into requisition our country's resources for war, still, if duty demands it, we have the money and we have the men.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Farms and Ranches

Cattlemen in convention assembled at Casper, Wyo., suggest that Congress amend the land laws in order to provide new ranges on terms acceptable to live stock growers. A familiar explanation of the high cost of cattle to live around. And a queer thing, that the cattle do not increase under the spur of high prices is explained by the continual narrowing of the boundaries of the range country, due to settlement.

It is estimated that the Government holds in trust 300,000,000 dry acres. Why not irrigate some portion of this and let the cattle on? The Government assists the farmers in that fashion, but does nothing for the rancher. It is because there are many farmers and only a few ranchers? Congress has a keen sense of the voting value of benevolence. The consumer, thought, might be interested in the appeal of the cattlemen. It seems a sound proposition, if the deserts can be made to blossom in fruits and vegetables that they can easily be coaxed to grow the simple fodder required by live stock. The cattlemen profess a willingness to build their own irrigation plants. All they ask is that the law be adjusted so that they can be guaranteed the term of years sufficient to make their enterprise reasonably profitable.—Providence Journal.

Schofield Notes

[Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence]
SCHOFIELD BARRACKS, May 27.—The entire Schofield garrison of more than 5000 troops will be reviewed by Major-general William H. Carter, Friday at 10:30 a. m. The review will be held on the broad plain at the northeastern part of the post. After the entire command have passed in review at a walk, the mounted troops will pass in review at a trot and gallop.

The 25th Infantry is now considerably over its authorized strength, numbering 41 officers and 1878 men. In the 1st Infantry there are 43 officers and 1738 men; in the 4th Cavalry 37 officers and 924 men; in the 1st Field Artillery 31 officers and 655 men. With the addition of the Quartermasters Corps, Medical Corps and signal troops the garrison at Schofield Barracks numbers 160 officers and 5423 men. The Infantry regiments are considerably larger than many of the brigades that took part in the civil war.

Sergeant John Wainwright, Co. M, 1st Infantry gave a real lively party to a large gathering of friends at the quarters of Sergeant Whyte, and left for a long turlough on the mainland, sailing Tuesday on the Dix.

Several non-commissioned officers of Battery B, 1st Field Artillery have bought a brand new 7-passenger Studebaker, which they will put in the rent service.
